- NOTES AND EVENTS (1862, October 28). The Queensland Guardian (Brisbane, Qld. : 1860 - 1863), p. 2.

  An inquest was held yesterday at Oxley Creek, on view of the body of Jackson Allen, a labourer, who was drowned last Saturday whilst bathing in the Brisbane River. From the evidence of a fellow labourer who had accompanied him, it appeared that deceased was not a good swimmer, though he had bathed several times at the same place ; that on entering the water this last time, it being mid-day, he was in a very heated state ; and that he had the same morning taken medicine. The presumption is that he was seized with a cramp and sank helplessly. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of "accidentally drowned."

- MAGISTERIAL INQUIRY, (1869, February 8). The Brisbane Courier (Qld. : 1864 - 1933), p. 2.

  MAGISTERIAL INQUIRY,
  A MAGISTERIAL inquiry was held by Massie on Friday, touching the death of John Lewis Ashworth. The following evidence was taken :-
  John Ahern of the Sportsman's Arms, deposed I have known the deceased the last fifteen months ; he was a commission agent at Maryborough ; he came to Brisbane last Tuesday, and stopped at our house ; he was between 30 and 35 years of age ; he was short and stout ; he did not complain of being unwell when he first came to the house ; since I knew deceased, he was not in the habit of drinking much ; he only drank in moderation ; he told me his object in coming to town was to get some money that had been sent him from home through Messrs. Little and Browne ; he was in and out during the day of his death (Thursday last) ; last saw him alive about 11 o'clock in the' morning of that day ; he was perfectly sober ; to the best of my belief he had not had more than two or three nobblers that day ; about half-past 7 o'clock in the evening, two men came to enquire for him ; I had not seen him myself since the time I mentioned in the morning ; I went to see if he was in his bedroom ; the knob of the door was loose, and I could not open it; I then went to the window which was open, and called deceased by name ; he made no reply , went into the room through the window, and found deceased lying on his left side on the outside of his bed ; I thought he was asleep, and shook him ; I found was as hot as fire, and wet from perspiration ; I returned at once to the man who had been inquiring for his, named Shapcott, and told him I could not wake the deceased ; I did not then think he was dead, he was so hot and limber ; Dr O'Doherty was sent for, came within a quarter of an hour from the time I first saw the deceased and pronounced him dead ; the room where de ceased was found was about ten feet square ; there was only one window to it.
  Patrick Hanlow, bootmaker, deposed, I lodge at the Sportsman's Arms ; dined there on Thursday last, deceased was also at the table, noticed he ate very little ; he took no grog or liquor ; he complained very much of heat ; last saw him alive about half-past 1 o'clock - he was then in the parlor, after dinner, lying on the sofa.

William Edwin Shapcott, gold miner deposed : I have known the deceased four years he used to be clerk to Skyring, the butcher ; he was lately commission agent at Maryborough called at Ahern's on Thursday to see him ; first called at 4 o'clock in the afternoon ; was then informed he was out ; returned in an hours time, and was again informed he was not in; Ahern called again shortly after 7 o'clock ; went to look for him ; on his return, he said he had shaken deceased, but could get no answer ; we returned to the room, and found deceased lying , dressed, all but his coat, on his bed, his shirt was unbuttoned at the throat, and open in front ; saw that he was dead ; deceased had told me he was a single man.

George Gilham, a member of Burton's company, deposed : I came to Brisbane in the Gympie coach last Tuesday ; deceased was also a passenger ; he complained of the heat but not more than I did myself; last saw him alive at Willett's on Thursday afternoon about 3 o'clock ; he had a glass of ale only ; he said he was going home, and should have read ; about four or five days before we left Gympie, I heard deceased had had a fit.

Christopher Blunden, Acting Sergeant of police, deposed : I received information of the death of the deceased about 8 o'clock Thursday evening ; went to the room where he was found, searched his pockets and found in them £41 9d. in cash ; there was a valise in his room containing amongst other things, a pocketbook in which was a cheque for £35, drawn George Skyring ; a gold ring was afterward given me by Constable Burke, which he had taken from deceased's finger, when they were placing him in the coffin ; made an exact inventory of all the property pointed out to me belonging to deceased, and took charge of it.

Kevin Izod O'Doherty, a duly qualified medical practitioner, deposed : I made a post mortum examination of deceased this day (Friday) was called in to see him about 8 o'clock on the day evening ; found him lying dead on top of the bed, in a small bedroom ; head and face were extremely congested; there was a frothing at the mouth and an intense heat over the whole body ; on stripping the body on Friday, found the head and neck black, and the general surface of the body congested ; there was no evidence of any external injury ; on opening the head and removing skull cap found the surface of the brain much congested, blood and serum were fused on the surface of the brain ; a good of serum was also found in the entire brain ; on opening the chest found the organs healthy ; the cause of death was congestion of the brain, most probably caused by the excessive heat of the weather ; deceased was …dently of an apoplectic habit.

The finding was in accordance with the …cal evidence,

An order was made that all the property of the deceased should be handed over to George Edward O'Brien, acting for the Curator of Intestate Estates.

The late Mr. C. H. Barlee, whose death is announced in our telegrams this week, was well known to old Brisbane residents as a Parliamentary shorthand-writer in the early days of the colony. He was cousin to Mr. F. P. Barlee, the Colonial. Secretary of Western Australia. As a genial and prolific writer, Mr. Barlee stood high amongst his fellow journalists, and many of us will remember his graphic sketches of the " Caboolture Hunt," for he was an ardent votary of the chase. His fugitive sketches, written whilst at Gympie, were also full of dry caustic humour. As with many other Queenslanders, Sydney did not improve his health, yet he made a gallant fight for success even there. His little brochure of " Once a Week," published in Sydney in 1878, was well written and edited, and showed the energy of the man and his talent as a litterateur. but it fell stillborn on a market which craved the more modern, successful, and sensational style of "weekly." Mr. Barlee's chief fault was an aptness to take offence at times when none was meant, and but for this he might have been a more successful man. He can, however, be ill spared from the ranks of colonial journalism.

  John Wallace Barnett, who died on September 3, 1872, at the age of 46, was a well known man in Brisbane, where he was Consular Agent for the United States, a country in which he had lived for some years. He and Heusmann, and G. R. Fyfe, were once owners of one of the principal Mount Perry mines, and the town of "Fyfe Barnett," actually stood on the present site of the town of Mount Perry. Burnett's only son, Sydney Barnett, married a daughter of William Baynes, once partner in the squatting firm of Moore Brothers and Baynes, owners of Barambah Station, on the Burnett. Baynes was returned as member for the Burnett, at the General Election of 1878, as a supporter of McIlwraith. He was a fine, genial, honest fellow, and a general favorite on both sides of the House. The present writer was a member in those days, and can write with authority. Sydney Barnett lives to-day at Ormiston, on the Cleveland railway.

- INQUESTS. (1864, January 19). Queensland Daily Guardian (Brisbane, Qld. : 1863 - 1868; 1883 - 1884), p. 2.

An enquiry was held yesterday at the Prince of Wales Hotel, Edward-street, into the circumstances which produced the death of Mr. Ralph Black, of the Paisley boarding house. The inquiry was conducted by Dr. Cannon, coroner. From the evidence adduced it appeared that the deceased had gone into his stable on Friday night last, accompanied by his wife for the purpose of attending to some horses when one of them throw up his hind feet, kicking the deceased and knocking him down. The deceased stood up again leaning against a post, and said "I am done for." On the following day Dr. Emmelhein was sent for, who prescribed for him, pronouncing him dangerously hurt. Deceased gradually got worse, and died about half-past two on Sunday afternoon. In accordance with the evidence the jury brought in a verdict of "Accidently killed by being kicked by a horse."

- BY GONE BRISBANE. (1908, February 9). Truth (Brisbane, Qld. : 1900 - 1954), p. 7.

Caroline Jane Blakeney, buried on March 23, 1866, was a little girl, six years and 20 days, of age, daughter of William and Eliza Blakeney. Blakeney was the once well-known Registrar-General, and son of Judge Blakeney. One of his daughters married T. H. B. Barron, and another married S. B. Leishman, the squatter. Both were fine looking women. One of Mrs. Barron's daughters is the wife of one of Sir Arthur Palmer's sons. C.J. Blakeney, a once well-known lawyer at Brisbane, Cairns, and Cooktown, was another son of the Judge.

- DEATH OF THE SHERIFF. (1864, February 16). The North Australian (Brisbane, Qld. : 1863 - 1865), p. 1 (SUPPLEMENT TO THE "NORTH AUSTRALIAN.")

DEATH OF THE SHERIFF.

OUR community were startled by a rumour prevalent yesterday afternoon, that Mr. William Anthony Brown, Sheriff of Queensland, and late Police Magistrate, Brisbane, was dead. Upon enquiry, the report proved correct. Mr. Brown, who had been previously ailing for some time past, expired at a quarter-past one o'clock. He came out direct to Sydney during the time that Earl Grey was the Colonial Secretary. The Government of England had determined to establish a new penal colony, to be called North Australia, with the capital at Glad-stone, Port Curtis. Major George Barney was sent out as Governor, and Mr. Brown received the staff appointment of Sheriff. They remained some time there until a change in the home Government, when orders arrived from Great Britain to abandon the new colony, and the various officers were placed under the auspices of the New South Wales Government to be provided with positions as opportunity occurred. In the year 1848, the office of Clerk of Petty Sessions became vacant in Brisbane, and Mr. Brown was appointed to fill it. He united in his own person the three offices of Clerk of Petty Sessions. Clerk of the Court of Requests, and Post-master. He continued in these positions until the appointment of Captain Wickham as Government Resident, when Mr. Brown received the appointment of Police Magistrate, which Captain Wickham had filled up to that period. Soon afterwards the office of Sheriff was added to the Police Magistracy, and Mr. Brown continued to fill both offices till the close of the year. The rapidly accumulating public business of both departments rendered it necessary that each office should be held distinctly, so that on the 1st of January, Mr. Massie was appointed Police Magistrate, and Mr.Brown retained the office of Sheriff. The decease of Mr. Brown will prove a serious loss to a large circle of friends, to whom he had endeared himself by his genial, social manners, and the poor will especially have occasion to deplore hls loss. In all the relations of life Mr. Brown was deservedly beloved and esteemed.

- THE NEW CHIEF JUSTICE OF QUEENSLAND. (1863, January 24). The Courier (Brisbane, Qld. : 1861 - 1864), p. 2.

THE NEW CHIEF JUSTICE OF QUEENSLAND.

We understand that James Cockle, Esq., of the Middle Temple and Midland Circuit, Barrister-at-Law, has been selected by Sir Roundell Palmer (we believe, upon the recommendation of Chief Justice Erle and other high judicial authorities) to be the first Chief Justice of Queensland. In compliance with the recommendation of his Grace the Duke of Newcastle, and in the spirit of the resolutions passed by the Queensland Parliament in the session of 1862, the choice was left absolutely to Sir Roundell Paleor, the present Solicitor-General of England, whose character as a scholar and statesman, as well as a lawyer, is well known. Mr. Cockle was to leave England by the overland mail of December, so he may be expected to assume his office about the middle of February. Mr. Cockle is a Master of Arts of Trinity College, Cambridge, where he took honors of the highest class, having been a Wrangler. He is also a Fellow of the Royal Astronomical Society, and of the Cambridge Philosophical Society. He is a practising barrister of above sixteen years' standing. We understand that the new Chief Justice is married, and has a family.

- ECHOES OF THE PAST (1938, April 30). Warwick Daily News (Qld. : 1919 -1954), p. 6.

ECHOES OF THE PAST
A NOTABLE PIONEER
(By "Gooragooby," Dalveen.)
Some two years hence—1940—a worthy occasion presents the Darling Downs with an opportunity of attracting all Australia's attention, when the proposed project for commemorating the centenary of the first free land settlement in what is now Queensland, and the foundation of its pastoral industry, may be brought to a complete consummation.
The late Mr. Thos. Hall, in his "Early History of Warwick, etc.," announces that a smart officer named Ernest Elphinstone Dalrymple, on furlough from a Highland regiment stationed in India, paid a visit to his ancestral home in Aberdeen, Scotland, in the late thirties. He had travelled all over India, Ceylon, and North America, and was a brilliant platform speaker, having the happy way of attracting and holding an audience. During his son's visit Sir Robert Horn Elphinstone Dalrymple gave a social to his tenantry so that they could meet the visitor, whom many of them had known in his youthful days. Ernest had now developed into the thoughtful, campaign-scarred man, and as he had always been a keen observer the social was to be made doubly attractive, because he was to make the speech of the even-ing. After touching in an interesting way about the East, also on the slave conditions of North America, foretelling the Civil War which afterwards convulsed the United States, he alluded to Allan Cunningham's exploration of the Darling Downs. In a fascinating speech he pointed out the many opportunities the people had of improving their prospects in life by going to the new colonies, and much to the surprise of his father and the audience, announced his intention of selling his commission, forming a party of Aberdonians, and making his way to the Darling Downs, in Australia. What tremendous after effects this speech had! … With the public mind interested Ernest Dalrymple had no trouble in quickly forming a party of ten young fellows, in which Dalrymple was placed in charge. Some of the members were Patrick and George Leslie, George and John Gammie, George McAdam, and James Fletcher—early pioneers of the Downs, every one of them."
Ernest Dalrymple was the moving spirit in settlement on the Darling Downs, or to be more precise he was the inspirer of it all. He was second to Pat Leslie in the earliest arrivals, being in charge of Leslie's cattle as well as his own. In July, 1840, he made North Talgai his headquarters, and shortly Goomburra another of the out-stations of the original Canning Downs passed from the Leslies to Dalrymple, after whom the creek on which Allora now stands was named. Dalrymple sold it to the Aberdeen Company, for whom John Deuchar managed in the early forties. Elphinstone, a rail siding three miles on the Warwick side of Clifton, was named after one of Dalrymple's Christian names. It was to Jubb who, in the forties and fifties, kept a hostelry on the eastern fall of the Main Range, that Dalrymple complained, "that Providence had in his case omitted the one great blessing of all—namely, health."

He was not spared long enough to enjoy the fruits of his labour, passing away at Brisbane on November, 4, 1844, at the age of 24 years. From this it would appear he was only 18 years of age when he prevailed on a number of Aberdonians to throw in their lot with him, and try their fortunes in Australia. The men of his day, so history affirms, maintained that his early death was a tragedy, and a severe blow to the Darling Downs, for he possessed judgment and mental balance far beyond his years.

Of the burials recorded in the Moreton Bay (later Brisbane) Anglican Church's register No. 6 was that of Ernest George Beck Elphinstone Dalrymple. He was buried in the old cemetery at Milton, where his grave was to be seen 50 years later at least. It was in a reserved portion, and for many years was not disturbed by subsequent attention by the sextons. In the memorials of the dead, preserved in the Brisbane Cathedral (St. John the Evangelists' Church), the first in point of time is a black marble tablet with a white border, the work of Patten, a Sydney monumental mason, and bears the following inscription: "Sacred to the memory of Ernest Elphinstone Dalrymple, sixth son of Sir Robert Dalrymple, Horn Elphinstone, Bart, who departed this life November 4, 1844, aged 24 years."

HOPKINS.—On the 12th April, at her father's residence, Petrie-terrace, Brisbane, Clara Ann, eldest daughter of Thomas and Melinda Hopkins, late of Bishop Sutton, Chew Magna, Somersetshire, England, after a long and painful illness, aged 29 years. [Bristol papers please copy.]

- BYGONE BRISBANE. (1908, January 26). Truth (Brisbane, Qld. : 1900 - 1954), p. 11.

Can anyone enlighten us concerning Clara Ann Hopkins, who died on April 12, 1874, aged 29, and on whose grave is this extraordinary verse —

She is not as we saw her last, On a suffering dying bed ;
To her all death and pain are past, And by living streams she is led
She has learned the sacred story, Of the Saviour's dying love.
Her eyes now see the glory That awaited her above."

If the writer of this had seen the look in the eyes of those who read it, he would HAVE FLED AWAY SOMEWHERE
In the middle of the night.

A Serious accident occurred yesterday afternoon, causing the death of one man and the injury of another. The man who was killed is named Edward Lewthwaite, a laboring man resident in South Brisbane, and the circumstances attending the occurrence as far as we can learn are as follow:- Mr Reading, the contractor, was carrying out for Mr. D. L. Brown the raising and removal of a wooden house, situated at the residence of Mr. D. L. Brown, Bowen Bridge road. In this work four men were engaged, the deceased being one. The edifice had been raised by means of the proper appliances from the piles on which it rested, when, owing to some unexplained cause, it fell asunder, and one of the joists fell upon Lewthwaite's back, breaking it, and causing almost instantaneous death. A man named Tucker also I received severe injuries from some of the falling timber. Dr Bancroft was at once sent for, and arrived as promptly as possible. His aid was, of course, unavailing in Lewthwaite's case, but he at once attended to the injuries of Tucker, which were not considered of a dangerous character. After his wounds had been dressed properly he was removed to the hospital. Lewthwaite, who was a native of Coventry, England, was, we believe, a hard working steady man, and leaves a wife and three children.

- The Courier. (1872, June 27). The Brisbane Courier (Qld. : 1864 - 1933), p. 2.

A COUPLE of very serious accidents occurred on board the barque Tyra on Tuesday night, to Mr. and Mrs. Lockyer, the former of whom, on behalf of the Customs, is stationed on board the vessel at present lying alongside Brown's wharf, where she is dischaging her cargo of cocoanut oil. Mr. Lockyer, hearing a noise on deck, came up from the cabin for the purpose of ascertaining the cause, and, the night being dark, he did not perceive that a portion of the hatch had been removed, the result being that he fell into the hold and received very serious injuries. Mrs. Lockyer, who followed her husband up from the cabin met with a similar mishap, and was also seriously injured. The accidents, it appears, originated in the first instance through some young urchins getting on board the vessel, with the intention it is presumed, of appropriating to themselves some of the cocoanuts. It is sincerely to be hoped that the young thieves may be found out, as the lesson they will surely receive should be amply sufficient to deter others from following their example.

Edmund Morris Lockyer, who died on June 28, 1872, aged 62 was a son of Major Lockyer, who came up the Brisbane river in a whale boat in 1825, and wrote a full description of all he saw. Among the men with him were two red-haired soldiers, at whose fiery ringlets the blacks were much astonished. Lockyer and his party camped one night at the mouth of Oxley Creek, and in his diary he says "Emu's were running about all night making an intolerable noise." As emus do not move at night, and make very little noise at any time, Lockyer evidently referred to the stone plover, usually known as the curlew. Lockyers name is handed down to us by Lockyer's Creek, at Gatton, one of the tributaries of the Brisbane river.

Conspicuous among the graves of the white race is the solitary last resting place of "Sing Cong Long," in the Presbyterian ground. How came this one lonely disciple of Confucius and Mencius, and Bhudda, among the adherents of the stern merciless uncompromising John Knox, who bearded the Scottish lioness, Queen Mary, in her den ? Sing Cong Long was a Chinese merchant and fruiterer, who had shops in Albert-street, and was a GENERAL FAVORITE WITH ALL CLASSES.
And yet Sing Cong Long had unscrupulous enemies — with whom he wanted to get even — and he studied the various religions to ascertain which one gave most promise of a conclusive settlement. He decided in favor of Presbyterianism after reading a translation of a sermon by Calvin, who held that the chief joy of the Blessed was in sitting on the battlements of Heaven and joyfully contemplating the gymnastic performances of lost souls basting in the sulphur ocean of fire underneath ! Hence the appearance, of Sing Cong Long in the Presbyterian cemetery !

- BYGONE BRISBANE. (1908, January 26). Truth (Brisbane, Qld. : 1900 - 1954), p. 11.

Captain Graham Mylne, M.L.A., and his wife, Helena White, buried a five months old child on May 31, 1868. Mylne in that year was member for the Warrego. The Mackenzie Ministry was in office, and in a precarious position. Not a soul of either the Council or Assembly is alive to-day. South Brisbane was represented by T. B. Stephens, North Brisbane by A. B. Pritchard and Dr. O'Doherty, the Valley by Charles Lllley. The 20 members of the Council, and the 31 of the Assembly are all dead. Mylne spoke on the position of the Ministry, who had been DEFEATED ON THE ADDRESS-IN-REPLY,
by 13 to 11, and the Governor refused to accept their resignation. Mylne's wife, the mother of the child at Paddington, was a Miss White, sister of Albert White, of the Logan River, now of Bluff Downs, west of Townsvllle. Besides his station on the Logan, Albert White held old Coombabah Station which took all the country from the Coomera River to Nerang, including Southport.
In 1870, the Manager of Coombabah was old Sanily Gordon, who kept a whole pack of kangaroo dogs, the leaders of which were usually about a mile ahead of Gordon on the march. Present writer was a youth of 17, when on the first visit to Queensland, in 1870, and we had two days kangarooo hunting with Gordon. Southport was then covered by heavy forest, with rank undergrowth, and long grass, full of wallabies.
Albert White, the present owner of Bluff Downs on the head of the Burdekin, was in Brisbane last week. He is one of the finest specimens of men in Queensland. He was a young man when owner of Nindooimbah and Coombabah. His sister, who is still alive and well, in Sydney, but Mylne died many years ago, at Eatonswell Station, on the Clarence.
