A MILITARY funeral took place yesterday, the deceased being a private in the 50th Regiment, named James Paish. The ceremony was conducted in the usual way, and attracted a considerable number of spectators. The procession started from the barracks about 5 o'clock p.m., the Volunteer Band watch formed part of it playing the "Dead March" as it slowly moved along. All the detachment that could be spared attended, commanded by Captain Eden. The deceased had been about four years in the regiment and had always been a sober, steady man. The cause of his death was dropsy.

  BYGONE BRISBANE
  The Paddington Cemetery.
  Amelia Isabella Peake, who died on April 22, 1873, aged only 24, was the wife of Captain Peake, first Captain of the old Government steamer Kate, which finally sank in Moreton Bay. Two of Mrs. Peake's infants are buried with her. The ages 24, 25, and, 26, were the fatal periods for an appalling number of young wives. When his wife died, Captain Peake went to Sydney, and died somewhere in New South Wales.
  One day in 1872, somebody saw two LARGE STRANGE FISH in the pond in the Botanic Gardens. Captain Peake had a seine net, and that, was taken down to the pond. The fish were caught, and caused great astonishment, as no one at the time. had seen anything like them. But the usual expert came along and found they were two specimens of the Ceratodus of the Mary and Burnett Rivers. Enquiries proved that they had been caught years before, in Tinana Creek, and been, sent down to the Gardens by the late R. B. Sheridan, then collector of Customs, in Maryborough. Then they were restored to the pond and vanished again into oblivion until the days of Curator McMahon, when one of his men a Teutonic gentleman, was cleaning out the pond, and caught a Ceratodus, then, weighing about 12lbs. The German merely remarked, "By shingo dis vos goot," and took it home and ate it. Next day he caught another, but McMahon happened to come along, and sent it up to Curator De Vis, at the Museum. De Vis, saw at once what the fish was, and sent it back to the Gardens, where it was placed in the pond, none the worse of the temporary absence. Finally that one and his mate were removed to the fountain pond at the south-west corner of the Gardens, and both were taken away by the flood of 1893, or 21 years after Captain Peake HAD HAULED THEM OUT in his seine net.

- DOMESTIC INTELLIGENCE. (1855, January 6). The Moreton Bay Courier (Brisbane, Qld. : 1846 - 1861), p. 2.

MURDEROUS ASSAULT AND ATTEMPTED SUICIDE. —On Sunday evening, the last day of the year, the neighbourhood of Stanley-street, South Brisbane, was thrown into a state of considerable alarm by a report that Mr. Daniel Peterson, many years carrying on business as a storekeeper in this town, had shot his wife and cut his own throat It was about ten o'clock at night, and the house and shop were closed, but after the alarm became general, several people broke into the premises, and the police having arrived, Dr. Cannan was sent for, when it was ascertained that Mrs. Peterson had been shot with a pistol through the thigh, without breaking the bone, and that the unhappy perpetrator of this outrage, her husband, had inflicted several gashes in his own throat, with a razor, severing the windpipe, but not separating any vital artery. All proper attention was paid to the wounded persons, and we understand that they are both considered to be now out of danger. From the subsequent depositions of Mrs. Peterson and a servant girl in her employ, it appears that Mr. Peterson had been drinking hard all day on Sunday, and at night, on asking his wife to go to bed, she expressed her reluctance as he had a pair of loaded pistols in the bed. Upon this he took the pistols into the servant's room and put them into her bed, when the girl became alarmed and got away. Immediately afterwards she saw Mr. Peterson with a pistol presented at her mistress, which he fired. The girl ran to make an alarm, and states that she told two or three persons outside, who (to their eternal disgrace if it be true) said that they were afraid to go in. When she returned she saw Mr. Peterson cutting at his throat with a razor, and a large pool of blood near. Soon afterwards the people rushed in, and he was secured. These facts having been deposed to on oath, a warrant has been issued against Daniel Peterson, who remains at his own house, in custody of the police, until he can be removed to undergo an examination for his crime. No motive whatever, save drunken madness, can be assigned for the attempted crime, as the poor lady so nearly murdered, is known to be a person of most amiable manners and irreproachable character, and has reared a large family with the utmost credit.- Since the above was in type, Mr. Peterson has been removed to the gaol.

- THE LATE BOAT ACCIDENT. (1863, November 2). The Courier (Brisbane, Qld. : 1861 - 1864), p. 2.

THE LATE BOAT ACCIDENT.
The Coroner, Dr. K. Cannan held an inquest on Saturday, at eleven o'clock, at the Sawyers' Arms, George street, on the body of Augusta Robinson, the wife of Dr. Robinson, of the ship Sunda, who came by her death on the previous day through the upsetting of a boat. After viewing the body which was lying at the morgue, the following evidence was taken:-
Frederick John Robinson deposed that he was a member of the R. C. S. E., and came to the colony as Surgeon-Superintendant of the ship Sunda ; Captain Bragg being commander. The body on view was that of his wife. On the previous afternoon he and others proceeded from Harris' wharf, in Captain Bragg's yacht the Waterwitch, and were going to the bay ; there was very little wind at starting, and they had to have recourse to the oars ; as they went past the shipping office they observed a gentleman like Captain Bragg situated on the hill, and he made some noise, which was interpreted to mean that they had to put in at Raff's wharf; they had to tack twice or three times to get alongside of Raff's wharf, but they ultimately got alongside and found that they had to take two casks aboard, one containing ale, and the other sherry. The casks were lowered into the boat by the officer on the wharf, who told how the casks were to be stowed, one was stowed on the larboard side on the top of some pig-iron which bit well, and held the cask. On the other side there was an irregular roll of some metal which prevented the other cask fitting well; he drew the attention of Mr. Pritchard - the second officer of the Saldanha - to the second cask, but he said it would ride very well; they had a moderate breeze, and no gusts of wind, down the river; they tacked down, and when they arrived at Breakfast Creek, they came close under the bank, and Mr. Brummidge, who had charge of the boat, weared her round; all sail was set, and the main sheet was fast - pulled tight; as the boat weared round, the cask from the starboard fell over to the opposite side; then the leeside, with great violence, and the boat filled quickly and went down ; they were at the time about five-and-twenty yards from shore; when he rose to the surface of the water some one caught hold of his coat, and he jerked the hold off; he saw Mr. Pritchard clinging to the top of the main-mast, which suddenly snapped, and Pritchard fell into the water, and he never saw any more of him; he swam to the shore exhausted; a little lighter called the Driver was within sixty yards of the place where the accident occurred, but the people aboard did not see it; he called to her for help, when she came up, and there was a boat sent ashore instantly; the boat picked up a box, a boat-hook, and an oar; the parties aboard were — Mrs. Robinson, Maria Brown, the stewardess, Mr. Pritchard, chief officer of the Saldanha, Mr. Brummidge, a second cabin passenger, an able-seaman belonging to the Saldanha, whose name he did not know, and himself; the upset was purely an accident, and he would state that Mr. Brummidge and Mr. Pritchard were perfectly steady ; the accident would not have occurred but for the breaking away of the cask from the starboard side; the cask contained 28 gallons of sherry and was marked and addressed to the captain of the Star of England, the yacht did not turn over, but sunk; all on board were perfectly sober; he went up to Mr. Brown's house, and Mr. Brown kindly sent his servant in to the police-office to report the accident, and Mr. Brown and himself went down to the water's edge to try if they could discover something ; but they never saw anything.

To a Juror: The yacht was capable of carrying much more cargo, and would have carried twenty souls with perfect safety.

Martin Adisson deposed that he was in the lighter trade; he was going down the river in the Driver on the previous day, and saw the Waterwitch going down the river at the same time; it was ahead of the Driver; his cutter got fouled, and he lost sight of the Waterwitch, as it took him some time to get clear; he afterwards tacked, and saw the last witness standing on the bank hailing him ; he saw nothing of the Waterwitch ; he and another man got into a boat and they picked up the articles mentioned; they pulled about for some time, and afterwards picked up the two casks; there was not much wind at the time.

John Matheson deposed that he was a ferryman at Bulimba, and that on the previous day, at half-past four, he saw something floating in the river; he pulled towards it, and found it was the body of a woman; he hauled her close to the stern of the boat, fastened a rope round her, and towed the body up to Giles's wharf; he heard that a boat had capsized, and he afterwards picked up the two casks, a large chest, and some hats; he did not see the accident.

Captain Bragg, R.N.R., here stated that he did not hail the boat, nor had he authorised anyone to send the casks down ; the yacht, otherwise, was perfectly secure, and properly ballasted; he did not know who sent the casks by his yacht; he confirmed the statement on oath.

Verdict— "Accidentally drowned by the sinking of the yacht, the accident being caused by the careless stowing of the casks taken on board at Raff's wharf."

DEATH OF MR. RYLAND.
We regret to announce the death, at an early hour this morning,of Mr. John Hawksworth Ryland, manager, and for some short time past, acting general manager of the Queensland National Bank. The deceased gentleman has been suffering for six weeks past from a severe affection of the brain— the cause of his death. Mr. Ryland has been connected with the National since its opening in 1872, and during that time he has enjoyed the entire confidence and approval of his directors, and of the customers of the bank; Mr. Ryland leaves a wife and family to mourn their loss. From the Australasian Insurance and Banking Record, we gather the following particulers of Mr. Ryland
Mr. John H. Ryland has been promoted from the assistant managership to be manager at Brisbane, of the Queensland National Bank Mr. Drury retaining of course his position as general manager. Mr Ryland received his early training in the Union Bank of London, and was selected out of three hundred aplicants for the appointment of deputy secretary and treasurer of the Bank of Bombay; whilst there he took part in the initiation of the Government note currency, which replaced that of the local institutions.
This, by the way, was a work of some difficulty in a country with half-a-dozen different languages and very little English spoken, and where any change is viewed by the natives with great distrust. He subsequently returned to England and came out to Australia, with the intention of settling in Victoria. Hearing of the opening for a local bank which Queensland presented, he went there in 1872, and succeeded in launching the Queensland National Bank, becoming acting-general manager, until Drury took permanent charge, when he became assistant-general manager, now appointed manager at Brisbane, where the head office is situate. Speaking from the opinion of those who know him, and from the work he has done, there can be no doubt that Mr. Ryland is a banker possessed of high qualifications. Of the success of the Queensland National Bank, in which he has been one factor, there is no room for doubt.

The funeral will take place at half-past three to-morrow afternoon.

Queensland National Bank building, Brisbane, ca. 1872 - State Library of Queensland. This Queensland National Bank building was the first head office, opened in this leased three story building known as Warry's Store. It was opened on 3 June 1872. It served as head office until 1885.

- The Courier. (1869, March 8). The Brisbane Courier (Qld. : 1864 - 1933), p. 2.

A Mr. Joseph Saville, a farmer of Oxley Creek, died suddenly yesterday. It seems that, in the morning, he had gone out stock-riding on a young and restive horse, ond about 4 o'clock, p.m., he was found lying on the Ipswich-road, a little distance beyond Mr. Macdonald's public-house, in a dying-state. He was removed to Brisbane, but death ensued before he reached the ferry on the other side of the river. The deceased was unconscious from the time he was found till his death, and the cause of his death is at present unknown. A post mortem examination and a magisterial inquiry will be held this day. The deceased leaves a wife and family.

- SUDDEN DEATH. (1869, March 13). The Queenslander (Brisbane, Qld. : 1866 - 1939), p. 7.

SUDDEN DEATH.
AN inquiry was held on Mar. 8, touching the death of Joseph Saville, aged 32, a timber-getter, who was picked up in a dying state on the Ipswich-road, and died while being conveyed to town. The following is an abstract of the evidence taken: — Charles Catchpole stated he saw the deceased Joseph Saville on the previous afternoon, about 3 o'clock, trying to mount a newly broken-in horse, in Freeman's paddock, at Oxley Creek; after some difficulty he succeeded and rode down the road; the horse went quietly enough until witness lost sight of it; Saville was not quite sober then ; witness saw deceased again about an hour after, about half a mile from where he saw him start; he was then lying on his back by the side of the road, insensible and speechless ; witness went after Saville's horse and found him half a mile further on the road; the horse had on his saddle and bridle, but the latter was broken.

James Campbell Moffatt deposed he was a chemist, living in Edward-street; had known deceased for the last five years ; witness was at his father's house at Oxley on the Sunday evening about 5 o'clock, when some one came and told him that a man had been thrown off his horse; went immediately to where deceased was lying, near M'Donald's public-house; he was lying on his back, breathing stertorously; witness loosened the deceased's neck cloth, belt, and everything tight about him, and dashed cold water in his face, which seemed to revive him a little, but did not restore him to consciousness; he was insensible from the time witness saw him first until he died ; a spring cart happened to be passing; a mattress was put into it and the deceased laid on it; in that manner he was taken to the Plough Inn in South Brisbane; but he continued in the same state all the time; they waited there at the request of deceased's wife for Dr. Hancock, who had been sent for; before the doctor arrived witness felt deceased's chest and found there was no pulsation; the cart was then moved on to Dr. Emmelhainz, who examined deceased with a stethoscope and found that he was dead; Dr. Hancock came up immediately after; witness was of opinion that Saville had died before the cart moved from the Plough Inn.

George Freeman, a mate of the deceased in the timber business, was examined, but his evidence was unimportant. He said, however, that the horse the deceased was riding at the time of the accident was a troublesome one to mount; the deceased was a bad rider, and that very little liquor used to affect him.

Dr. Hancock deposed to having seen the body of the deceased, Joseph Saville, in the spring-cart, at Dr. Emmelhainz door, in South Brisbane, as described by the witness Moffatt; Saville had been dead about ten minutes or a quarter of an hour; witness had made a post mortem examination at the morgue that morning, when he found a fracture of the vertebra, which accounted for his death ; a fall off a horse on to a hard road would occasion the fracture of the neck which was the cause of death.

- THE OXLEY CREEK ACCIDENT. (1870, March 19). The Darling Downs Gazette and General Advertiser (Toowoomba, Qld. : 1858 - 1880), p. 3.

  THE OXLEY CREEK ACCIDENT.
  A MAGISTERIAL enquiry upon the body of Benjamin Taylor late an employee of Messrs Cobb and Co., who was drowned whilst attempting to cross Oxley Creek on Friday last, with Her Majesty's mails, was held at the Police-office on Monday morning, before the Police Magistrate. Francis Gill, a clerk in the Government Savings Bank, deposed that a little after 4 o'clock on the afternoon of the 11th, he met the deceased at Woogaroo on his way down with the Ipswich mail to Brisbane ; deceased had just arrived with the mail from Brisbane, and while there, a telegram arrived requesting him to return to Oxley with the Ipswich mails, and stating that a skiff would be waiting for him ; he then expressed a wish to get on as fast as he could ; he packed the mail upon one horse, and rode another ; they rode together until about three miles from Oxley, when his (Gill's) horse knocked up ; deceased then went on with the mails ; it was arranged between them that if no boat should be there they would wait until dark and then return to Goodna ; he arrived at Oxley Creek about 5 minutes after the deceased, who was then in conversation with Cobb & Co.'s groom stationed at Oxley ; this was on the Ipswich side of the Oxley Hotel, there was a large sheet of water flowing between us and the other side ; I said "where is the skiff?" he said, "there is no signs of it," I then suggested going back but he refused, and said he would go as far as the public house, but I attempted to dissuade him. I enquired of the groom if he knew what depth of water there was, he said about ten feet ; I as well as the groom again entreated him not to start and did all we could to prevent him ; he appeared annoyed with us for trying to prevent him going ; he shouted to the horse and said "Here goes !" these were the last words he spoke ; after proceeding about 20 or 30 yards the horse he was riding began to plunge, but the one with the pack swam well— every time the horse plunged it would rise from the water and fall back immediately afterwards right under water, but he evidently touched the ground every time he went down and the deceased was consequently submerged. Up to this time he had been leading the horse with the pack ; he then let the horse go and threw away his whip ; the horse and rider sank and did not rise again ; I said, " He is down, can you swim!" he said, " Only a little ;" after a short time we obtained the assistance of some butchers, who dived after the body without success ; at this time deceased must have been under water ten minutes ; this occurred about half-past 6 o'clock ; I then got the horse to return to Woogaroo, but was overtaken by darkness and returned to Oxley, and stopped on the Ipswich side of the creek ; I went to Goodna, and after seeing Sergeant Brady, telegraphed to Ipswich reporting the matter, and when the sergeant and witness arrived in Ipswich the body had been found ; there were no marks of violence upon it. Henry Erminich, a groom in the employ of Messrs Cobb and Co., corroborated the above statement in the main particulars. Sergeant Brady deposed to having arrived at Oxley immediately after the body was found ; I examined it and found no marks of violence thereon ; some articles of value were in his pockets, but which have been given up. The depositions as usual were forwarded to the Attorney-General. — Express.

  Obituary
  THE LATE JOHN BURROW TURNER.
  On Sunday last, July 20th, the above lamented gentleman died at his residence, Queen-street, Brisbane. For a long period he had been suffering from pulmonary consumption, but his disease did nor assume any serious form until a few weeks since, in consequence of a violent cold overtaking him after a journey of some weeks in the country. The death of Mr. Turner has created a feeling of general sympathy for his esteemed widow and friends ; his loss will also be felt by the promoters of all objects of public usefulness. During his residence here, about two years, Mr. Turner has been associated with most of the progressive movements of the day, — his excellent business habits and remarkable tact in pecuniary arrangements being always placed in requisition, and readily offered by him for the promotion of any good object. Amongst the most striking proofs of his ability were the confidence reposed in him by the Court of Directors in London, and the fact that the Government of Queensland had effected an arrangement to have their banking operations carried on under the charge of Mr. Turner; in addition to which he officiated as honorary treasurer of three or four of our most popular institutions — the Queensland Club and the Queen's Boat Club being especial objects of his interest.

Mr. Turner was for many years a faithful servant in the Union Bank of Australia. Having come to the colonies in 1845. he was introduced into the Bank, at Auckland, New Zealand ; afterwards was removed to Sydney ; thence to Launceston ; and from thence to Melbourne. Whilst residing in the latter city he received the appointment of Manager of the Bank at Brisbane, which post he filled to the day of his death with credit to himself and satisfaction to its directors.

The funeral of Mr. Turner took place yesterday afternoon, and was largely attended. Amongst those who paid the last tribute of respect to his memory, were the Colonial Secretary, Mr. Cowie (sub-inspector of the Bank), Mr. George Raff (local director), Messrs. Shepherd Smith, J. Kingsmill, and H. P. Abbott (the managers of the other Banks), the Sheriff, several members of both Houses of the Legislature, clergymen of various denominations, medical men, and the leading merchants and other citizens of Brisbane. During the day all the Banks were closed, and several places of business partially so during the afternoon. The impressive funeral service of the Church of England was conducted at the Cemetery by the Lord Bishop of Brisbane, who had been a personal friend of the deceased since his arrival in the colony.

ECHOES OF THE PAST
DOWNS MEMOIRS
(By "Gooragooby," Dalveen.)

Mr. Harry Beauchamp-Unwin, son of one of the members of the well-known London banking family of that name, some, 60 or 70 years ago, held a small interest in the Warwick Argus newspaper for a brief period in 1870–71, re-tiring from same shortly after the rush, to the Stanthorpe tin mines set in, and subsequently became part proprietor of the Quart Pot Creek news paper. He died on August 5, 1874, whilst in South Brisbane, and on the 29th of the same month a strange matter cropped up in reference to the affairs of the departed Harry B. Unwin. On his death his Stanthorpe partner, Mr. J. W. Pillar, was requested to examine his papers with a view to locating Unwin's will, but after careful examination nothing was to be found, and the curator of intestate estates then took charge. Mr. Raff ordered that his effects be sold. Whilst removing a quantity of furniture, including a chest of drawers, on to a dray, there was found among a lot of rubbish, a small box in the chest, of drawers, which on being forced open was found to contain a host of papers, deeds, etc., together with a will dated 1870. The will appointed Mr. Jas. Morgan (the late Sir Arthur's father) and Dr. Fuller, of Warwick, his executors. The whole of Unwin's property was left to his mother in England. Deceased was understood to be heir to considerable property to the Home land. The Stanthorpe newspaper then passed entirely into the hands of Mr. J. W. Pillar, he having purchased the interests of his late partner (Mr. H. B. Unwin). Mr. Pillar has long since followed his partner of the early seventies, and only a few months since Mrs. J. W. Pillar also set out on the long journey.

CLEVELAND.
(FROM A CORRESPONDENT.) March 3.
Our little community will be long before it recovers its loss by the death of Mr. James Webster, the lay reader. The circumstances connected with his brief illness and death are sad On Sunday, February 4th, Mr Webster, in returning from his evening duties at the Courthouse, got wet through, and failing proper precautions, was attacked by a violent cough and inflammation of the lungs, attended by fever and dysentery. The symptoms getting more serious, medical aid was obtained from Brisbane, and Dr O'Doherty advised immediate removal to the hospital. His exposure on the water at this inclement season it is feared tended to aggravate the symptoms, and notwithstanding every means that skill could device, he sank rapidly and died on Saturday, February 25. From the date of his appointment as lay reader, he was most active in his exertions to collect subscriptions for the building of a church and parsonage at Cleveland, in which he was most successful, the inhabitants, no matter, what creed they professed, joining liberally in the work as well as the visitors. His unassuming manners made him generally popular. Mr Webster was a native of Warwickshire, and on his first arrival in the colony was in practice in the medical profession. He leaves a widow and one child It will be gratifying to his many friends to learn that a liberal subscription was quickly raised to send home his widow and child to England. I wish this sad account could end here, but regret to say that it would be incomplete without some reference to an occurrence at the funeral of Mr. Webster which gave great pain to his friends Dr. Tufnell, who had called to see him at the hospital, volunteered to officiate at the funeral, on condition that the time be made to suit his convenience This was acceded to, but from some cause at present not ascertained, the widow and attending mourners were detained without any appearance of the Bishop or an notice being sent. After considerable delay at the grave, one of the mourners rode off and succeeded in obtaining the kind attendance of the Rev Mr Creyke, who performed the service.

- THE LATE MR. JAMES WEBSTER. (1873, March 6). The Brisbane Courier (Qld. : 1864 - 1933), p. 3.

THE LATE MR. JAMES WEBSTER.
TO THE EDITOR OF THE BRISBANE COURIER. SIR-I seldom take notice of remarks which are made by anonymous correspondents in the columns of a newspaper, but I think it right to take notice of the statement of your Cleveland correspondent in your paper of to day, and to say that it is simply and entirely untrue Your correspondent says -"Dr Tufnell, who had called to see Mr. Webster at the hospital, volunteered to officiate at the funeral on condition that the same be made to suit his convenience This was acceded to but, from some cause at present not ascertained, the widow and mourners were detained without any appearance of the Bishop, and without any notice being sent "I did not volunteer to officiate at the funeral (although I should have been quite ready to have done so if any desire to that effect had been expressed to me by the friends of the deceased) I could not to therefor have stipulated that the hour should be fixed to meet my convenience What I did do was to say to a friend who was with Mrs Webster during the illness of her husband, that in the event of his decease, we should be glad if Mrs Webster would at once come to us at Bishopsbourne, and, as soon as I heard of his decease, I wrote to Mrs Webster to ask her to do so I also sent a letter to the Resident Surgeon of the Hospital to say that we were expecting Mrs Webster, and to suggest that, if it would be I agreeable to her feelings, and could be conveniently arranged, the body should be brought over in the afternoon to the chapel at Bishopsbourne, and removed from hence to the cemetery for interment on the morning or afternoon of the following day. 'This proposal was, I found, much in accordance with poor Mrs Webster's feelings but I heard from her that a friend had previously made some arrangements which would render it impracticable -

Yours, &c,
E. W. BRISBANE.

HERBERT.—On the 25th April, Henry Arthur, son of A. O. Herbert, aged 3 years and 2 months.

- Local Intelligence. (1861, May 23). The Courier (Brisbane, Qld. : 1861 - 1864), p. 2.

Inquest.—An inquest was held at the Freemason's Hotel, yesterday, before the Coroner, Dr. Cannan, on the body of Henry Wells alias Smith, who died suddenly at his residence in Charlotte-street on the previous day. Some interest is attached to this case as it is the melancholy denouement of an elopement that made a noise in more than one of the Australian colonies about four months since. From the evidence it appeared that the deceased had resided for some twenty years in Tasmania, where he was well-known as a coach driver and proprietor. He had a wife and family and some property at a place called Deloraine where he resided previous to his departure. About the time mentioned above he eloped with the wife of his employer, a publican named Spearman, and as the woman had also a family, the duped husband was much enraged and took energetic steps to have the pair apprehended. It appears that they went from Launceston to Melbourne and thence to Sydney, where the deceased had been apprehended on suspicion, but allowed bail, which he evaded and came on to Brisbane in the company of Mrs. Spearman and opened the lodging-house where he died. Up to Saturday last he was in his usual health, when he complained of a cold and in conversations held with several of the witnesses, he expressed fears of being apprehended by a detective he had heard had been sent after him to Rockhampton ; regretted the disgrace he had brought on his children ; and fretted for the position in which he had placed the partner of his wrong. On Sunday and Monday he continued to complain, and on Tuesday, after returning from the yard, he spoke to Mrs. Spearman, fell down on a sofa and died without a struggle. The medical evidence of Dr. Bell who had made a post mortem examination of the body was to the effect, that the immediate cause of deceased's death was disease of the heart, assisted by enlargement of the liver and obstruction of the respiration from the adhesion of the pleura ; and the verdict of the jury was that the deceased died from disease of the heart accelerated by nervous excitement.

An accident of a serious nature occurred on Saturday afternoon to Mr. Woodward, book-keeper, at Mr. Hardie's station, at Fassifern. It appears that the unfortunate gentleman started from South Brisbane, in company with Mr. Hardie, the Rev. Mr. Rumsey, and Mr. Howe, superintendent at Fassifern, about four o'clock, intending to reach Ipswich before dark. They had proceeded some five or six miles on their way, riding at a very rapid pace, when Mr. Woodward's horse (a very spirited animal) got quite beyond its rider's control, and dashed full against a dray coming in the opposite direction, unseating Mr. Woodward bringing him in contact with the iron of the dray, and breaking his leg in three places. He was placed on the dray, and conveyed as quickly as was compatible with safely into South Brisbane, where he was immediately attended by Dr. Lyons, who, on examination, found that he had sustained a compound fracture of the thigh, and laceration of the femoral artery. Temporary remedies having been applied he was taken to the hospital, where it was at first thought amputation was absolutely necessary. Subsequently, however, that idea was abandoned, and last evening the patient was progressing favorably.

A man named Thomas Yeowell, coachman in the employ of Mr. A. B. Buchanan, M.L.A., was found dead on the morning of April 28, in the room he occupied at the residence of his employer, Harris terrace, George-street. The deceased, who was a robust looking man, had arrived from Ipswich the previous afternoon, apparently in his usual health, and had made no complaints of illness. He retired to his bedroom at an early hour, and nothing more was seen of him that night. The attention of Mr. E. B. Drury, who lives in the neighborhood, was attracted during the morning by seeing the deceased, through the open door of his room, occupying a stooping position for a considerable time without moving, and suspecting that something was wrong, he obtained assistance and entered the apartment. It was then discovered that the unfortunate man was dead, and that death must have occurred while he was in the act of unlacing his boots the previous night, preparatory to his going to bed. Yeowell had only been about twelve months a resident of the colony, and was for a short time engaged as a cabdriver previous to his entering the service of Mr. Buchanan. He was reputed a sober, steady man. It is stated that his wife and daughter are now on their way from England to this colony. A post-mortem examination was held in the evening on the body of the deceased by Dr. Hancock, who found death had been caused by the bursting of the main artery leading from the lungs, which, from its appearance, must have been in a diseased condition.

  A remarkable man was James Low, who was born on January 4, 1791, in Scotland, and died at Brisbane on September 24, 1873. His wife, Isabella, died at "New Mill of Drumoak," in Aberdeenshire on October 29, 1831. A son died there also, aged 12. A daughter, Catherine, married to Charles Smith, died at Brisbane on December 8, 1863 and a son aged 19, died on September 2, 1851. His daughter, Annie, married Rudolph Zillman, son of J. L. Zillman, of German Station, one of the ORIGINAL GERMAN MISSIONARIES sent to Moreton Bay. by Dr. Lang in the convict days. James Low, was a very well known timber getter in the Maroochy and Mooloolah districts, and his name is handed down to posterity, attached to the tree known to both timber, getters' and botanists as " Jimmy Low," the botanical name being "Eucalyptus Resinifera."
